GERMAN DRIVEN LIKE SHEEP

War Party's Failure to Act for Peace and Refusal to Name Terms Subject of Attack by Berlin Editor—Says Military Powers Seek to Delude People With Idea That Allies Are Beaten.

London, July 8.—"What is hurting us in foreign estimation is the pitiful figure we have been cutting for two years, of a nation driven like sheep before the shepherd's crook. Right and left our enemies are harking for a sign that the German nation will accept peace, but you are near it nowhere. If they could we would be near that peace which to-day seems possible and which only a

In this—perhaps the boldest language uttered publicly in Germany since the war—Kurt Hiller, a member of the Die Kunst des Textes group, calls the war party for insisting upon appealing the country deaf and dumb in the question of the conduct and the merits of the war. The article is entitled, "Those who are Underground," and in it Hiller, of course, Underground, means the masses and the classes who forcibly are prevented from giving utterance to their thoughts upon the present and future of the country. There are the most striking passages of an altogether remarkable outburst:

"Our war zealots say the foe hasn't been forced to conclude peace, but is beaten. Who is beaten? Is England beaten? Is France, which has maintained her main positions since September, 1914? Is Russia? After having accomplished such victories as we have in Armenia and Galicia, by propagating such fiction our national strength is lamed—strength which for both offense and defense we still all require in all human calculation for a long time to come.

"The war party blandly proclaims an absolute certainty that which still remains to be proved. This is what I say to the war party: If you and finally to wake up, then rub your eyes and read Bismarck and the Emperor Frederick; their wars hardly had any resemblance to ours.

 You want the country to believe we Germans are a holy nation of heroic and invincible angels surrounded by devils, heretics, thugs and vipers. You propagate a myth that with the exception of our own allies the world consists of a brood of hell and of druid, mercenary vampires. Such a state of things never has been; such a pest of humanity as your hallucinations conjured up never was; such a superhuman victory as you hope never occurred; no nation would terate it, and to none would it bring blessings on which it could survive; and only at the cost of its own destruction could one group overthrow another.

"Our enemies are ready. So are we. Therefore, after the exhibition of their strength just given, they might without humiliation, make up accounts and look for a straight line toward peace. But we Germans must believe they will do that. Everywhere in Germany we hear that France, being exhausted, prefers humiliation to another winter campaign. And, whatever happens, will surrender before the winter. This is just as we have the talk about Germany

...the army, while we still have at home at least thirty army corps and 600, 000 recruits every year.

"We Germans can be satisfied with the success of the war if it simply drains the earth of soils long diseased with swamps of hate and envy, if it converts the once poisonous soil into a healthy workplace for the humans existing and creating for their own good rights and improvement, if it leads to a peace that reason by determination to respect the rights of those around them. A nation struggling in perpetual terror for its very life will not find it easy to consider calm when real values are. We're to him a reckless intoxication, make the struggle still more difficult. He is a meddling blunderer with a romantically benevolent will on the day of his death he will better and collapse.

"Beware the nation's fate," says a silly phantasm your language is conferred upon. Neither can it from the nation's eyes and let those who are giving their blood and it give their treasure determine their fate in freedom. Don't ventur-the sort of error the shepherd ought to carry in order to better the flock before him. Make your selves and your vision of the

from the slothful habit of eternally remaining in the flock of dumb even cattle."

Mrs. Richard A. Torrance died Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the home of her daughter, Mrs. L. L. Moore, in Taylorsville, where she had been on a visit for the past month. Mrs. Torrance had not been well for some time and owing to her extreme age, her family were greatly concerned about her. Several weeks ago she was taken seriously ill and the gradually grew worse until the end of Monday. Mrs. Richard A. Torrance of Washington, Mrs. Harry Sanders of Charlotte and several other of the children were at the bedside when the end came. She was 85 years of age and in addition to her husband, Capt. R. A. Torrance, is survived by nine children, namely, Mrs. L. L. Moore, of Taylorsville, Mrs. H. L. Moore, of Washington, D. C., Mrs. J. W. Zimmerman, and Mrs. Harry Sanders of Charlotte, R. B. Gaston Torrance, of Birmingham, Ala., J. G. Torrance, High Torrance and Wm. A. Torrance of Charlotte. The body will be brought to Huntersville today and carried to Hopewell Presbyterian Church, where the funeral will take place at 2 o'clock. The interment will be in the cemetery near by. Rev. Dr. D. H. Rolston, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Charlotte, will have charge of the service. Quite a company will go out from Charlotte to attend the service.

Mrs. Torrance was a daughter of the late Dr. L. B. Gaston and Polly Buford McFadden and was born in the old Gaston home place near Blenheim, S. C. Feb. 22, 1843. There were 11 in the family, four girls and seven boys, and all have now passed away except Miss Mary B. Gaston of Chester, S. C. Shortly after the war Miss Gaston was wedded to Capt. R. A. Torrance and they moved to the beautiful Torrance home place in Hopewell county to live. There they resided for a term of years, re-moing later to Charlotte. Mrs. Torrance transferred her membership from the old Hopewell church to the First Church of Charlotte and had been a member of this congregation ever since her coming to Charlotte.

THE UNITING OF AMERICA AND ENGLAND

Fifty-eight years ago America and England were practically one; they were apart; today they are only ten minutes apart. All this has been brought about by the Atlantic telegraph. Previous to this momentous event, it was talking together, under the sea, was more than a week before European news was known on this side of the water.

The unifier cable was hailed as a wholly American. The English furnished a considerable amount of the capital for the project, but the suggestion of the project, the laying of the cable across the Atlantic was wholly American, and Cyrus West Field is eminently entitled to immortal credit for the part he took in the project. Four years were devoted both bodily and mental work to the enterprise. He had the fatigues and perils of much travel to encounter; he had to persuade Legislatures as well as individuals; he had to interest capitalists in his scheme; he had to engage the services of eminent men of science, and he had to sustain repeated failures.

When the two countries were linked together in August, 1858, Queen Victoria sent the following message: "Her Majesty desires to congratulate the President upon the successful completion of that great international work, in which the Queen has taken the greatest interest. The Queen is convinced that the President will join with her in fervently hoping that the electric cable which now connects Great Britain with the United States will prove an additional link between the nations, whose friendship is founded upon their mutual interest and reciprocal esteem."

To this President Buchanan replied: "The President of the United States cordially recognizes the congratulations of her Majesty, the Queen, on the success of the great international enterprise, accomplished by the science, skill and indomitable energy of the two countries. It is a triumph more glorious because because more peaceful than was ever won by a battle. May the Atlantic Telegraph Company, under the blessing of Heaven, prove to be a bond of perpetual peace and friendship between the kindred nations and an instrument destined by Divine Providence to diffuse religion, civilization, liberty and law throughout the world."

The day these messages were exchanged was one of general rejoicing throughout the country. In New York the bells of Old Trinity Church struck up a merry tune, and the buildings were decorated with flags and salutes were fired in Washington. A meeting of both branches of Congress was called to order, and the suitable demonstration. In Louisville the Queen's message was announced by a grand display of fireworks; in Nashville the people gathered in the streets with music, bonfires were lighted and the bells through the city were rung for half an hour.

In Baltimore a proclamation that the following day two hundred guns should be fired and the city should be appropriately decorated. In Boston the great guns were fired at noon on the Common and all the bells of the city rung. In the evening of the following day all the flags in the Commodore were hung with French and American lanterns. In every other city of the country similar demonstrations were held.

Later celebrations on a much more extensive scale were held in most of the cities, and interchanging messages of good feeling were sent and received. The mayor of New York said: "The home of Franklin sends kindly greeting to the home of Field. God will send the humped thread of the man of science and the iron wire of the man of might made known his wonders."

At the big celebration in New York on September 1 a throng of men and women miles in length, through which Cyrus W. Field rode, standing in an open barouche, and was greeted throughout with the waving of handkerchiefs and cheers.

The completed cable reached both ends of the ocean, the Irish and Newfoundland shores, on August 1, and the first message sent across the ocean was: "Europe and America are united by telegraph. Glory to God in the highest; on earth peace and good will towards men." The station at Newfoundland was at once connected with the general telegraphic system of America and the station at New York with the British and European lines.

Now that the grain crop has been placed safely away out of reach of the weather. There is no mowing on the farm which is so important to keep in running order than the binder, and if it is to be used another year, then it should be all means be oiled well and ready to go. It may not seem that it is under shelter and out of the way where it will not get broken. Oiled you do you will be sure to have trouble when harvest time comes again. Farmers and Distributors should likewise be put away away, and some have that no particular look at the condition of all farm machinery, which will not be needed again this year should be mended, and when the time comes to use them, they will be in good condition.

The auto headed toward him, going at tremendous speed. The excited beheld him was upon his heels; he read: A motor-cycle neared him, by a careless ride sped, And an alarmist just above him was "Seconding on his head."

What did he do? He acted just as I would do or you. Grabbed off a manhole cover and just dropped his body through. But was he safe, you ask me? Was he ever sent again? No; the story says he landed just before a subway train!

THE BARON AND THE KNIGHT. It was a Robber Baron bold, Before the case began. His trusty blade, high-tariff-made, Destruction daily dealt. His castle bulged with grafted gold. And he was lovely faced, And, all against, men saw his vast Circumference of waist.

It was a Knight Crusader fine Who loathed the Baron's name. With my merriment all, Cried he, "I'll slay that braggart today. Oh! I will cleave him to the chine And tear him limb from limb. Until around there can't be found One particle of him."

The Knight the Robber Baron met Before the case again. "We're going to fight," exclaimed the Knight. "See that your soul's on straight! This is the time your scalp I get. You heartless, soulless thing! I hate your touch almost as much As I abhor the King!"

"You hate the King?" the Baron cried. "You hate this Wilson one!" With rage acute at him I shout. Each day a verbal gun. "Then, from this minute, far and wide As brothers we're on view: You hate that case Wilsonian? Brother, I hate him too."

And now the curious populace Whenever the show begins, Rush madly there to see that pair, The Knight-and-Robber tins! Each smiles into the other's face; Each to the other sings. "Your threat to cut I'm eager, but We first must cut the King's!"
